Disposition of Cremated Remains in Maryland

Maryland law does not require that cremated remains be placed in a cemetery. This does not mean that cremains can be freely scattered or otherwise disposed of on public land, or on the private property of another person, other than that of the decedent or the decedent's next of kin. (Public land, in this context, is any land owned by Federal, State, County or Municipal governments and includes forests, lakes, streams, and most desert areas.)

The following government departments have policies regarding the disposition of any matter over land or water. Compliance with the policies and procedures of the agencies noted below is required:

- Federal Department of Environmental Protection (U.S. Environmental Protections Agency, Title 40, Code of Federal Regulations, Section 229.1 (For burials at sea, please see text below)
- Maryland Department of Natural Resources
- Maryland Department of the Environment

Ordinarily, cremated remains can only be properly disposed of on the decedent's own private property, the property of the next of kin, or within a designated area in a cemetery or mausoleum. The scattering of cremated remains or the placement of cremated remains on the property may create an emotional experience not only for you, but for future property owners. If you decide to scatter numerous cremated remains on your property, please remember that cremated remains contain bone fragments and that the disposition of a significant amount of accumulated cremated remains at a site may constitute a solid waste or sediment and erosion concern under Maryland environmental laws.

Retention of cremated remains is permitted in the State of Maryland. However, should you move to another state with the cremated remains in your possession, you will be subject to the laws of that state.

Cremated remains may also be placed in a more permanent location, such as a cemetery or mausoleum niche. However, there is a cost for this type of placement, which should be discussed with the cemetery you choose.
